Introduction

The chief governor office of Transcaucasian territory was formed from the moment Georgia joined Russia, both for the internal governance of Georgia and neighboring kingdoms, principalities, and khanates. On January 18, 1801, the manifesto of Paul I was announced on the union of Kingdom of Georgia with Russia, and based on the decree of March 6, 1801 there was defined that "the whole Georgia is one Georgian province, divided into two part. Provinces - Kartalinsky and Kakhetinsky". After the death of Paul I, on September 12, 1801, the manifesto of Alexander I again confirmed complete union of Georgia with Russia, and in May 1802, the new government was officially inaugurated. The activities of the Tsarist government at that time were aimed at expanding the borders of Russian possessions beyond Kazkaza and strengthening the power and management of the newly annexed lands. On April 10, 1840, the Chief Administrator Office in Georgia was named the Office of the Chief Administrator of the Transcaucasian Territory. According to the resolution of February 9, 1846 “on the establishment of the Viceroy office of the Caucasus and Sovat of the main administration of the Transcaucasian territory”, the office of the main administrator of the Transcaucasian territory was liquidated. Fund materials were received in 1923 after the requisition of the viceroyal archive from the North Caucasus - the city of Krasnodar /former Ekaterinodar/, where it was evacuated in 1914, in connection with the opening of the Caucasian front. All the cases stored in the fund, according to their behavior and content, can be assigned to three periods, starting from the first one in 1801 and continuing until 1816, i.e. Gen. Ermolov in the management of Georgia; The second - constantly includes the control of General Yermolov until 1827, and then the third period, which lasts until the abolition of the foundation founder. The essential difference between these three periods is as follows: in the first period, the business had not yet started according to the usual, accepted religious condition: outgoing works in the name of the chief manager were written in the list without reduction, after which the issues written in black were destroyed. "High" Commands, ministerial relations and reports of subordinate places and persons were written separately for each part in special books. Parts means that correspondence in the Caucasus and Astrakhan provinces is one separate part, called Caucasus and Astrakhan; Internal and administrative orders - the second, Georgian, and diplomatic correspondence and correspondence about the management of semi-subjugated khanates - the third, so-called business order with some deviations, existed until 1816. In the second volume, lists continued as before, but everything started in the usual way. Finally, since 1927, the so-called border department that was used only for issues related to the internal administration of the khanates: Karabagh, Shekhinsk, Shirvan, Baku, Derbent and the estates: Imeretin, Guria, Megreli and Abkhazia. Diplomatic correspondence was handled by special officials associated with the executive heads, until later the diplomatic office was established as an independent institution, from which files were no longer sent to the archives of the main directorate. At the beginning of the 30s of the 19th century, under the chief manager, Baron Rosen, the internal administration of the Caucasus was changed.

In response to this, the cases in the Secretary were divided into the following parts: 1 / Georgian, 2 / Emerul - these parts included property management documents: Guria, Samegrelo and Abkhazia and Jaro-Belokani regions. 3/ Akhaltsikhe, 4/ Armenian, 5/ Muslim, 6/ Dagestani and*7/ Caucasian; As for the affairs of the Astrakhan province, they were under the jurisdiction of Astrakhan governor. In 1838, installment distribution was abolished, and from that year the business was carried on in the institution under the reference of April 10, 1840. The cases were distributed according to the deposited structure in the activity of the fund creator in the following form. Part 1, Table I. Correspondence concerning the administrative management of the region, search for foreign subjects, acquisition of Russian citizenship, issuance of passports, collection of taxes, liberation of peasants from serfdom, appropriation and sale of peasants.
